Excerpt: . . . grave, a place in which the mind could stretch its shriveled wings, where everything could be done mechanically and without fear of a sudden jar into disagreeable reality. When of an afternoon I stepped from the hurrying world into the first quiet woods on the way to my home, a great door swung to behind me and another life began, in which Rachels figure and swarthy, heavy-featured face had long ceased to interfere with my meditation. This night, however, before the meal was served, the kitchen door opened and my housekeepers inscrutable dull eyes rolled around the walls of the room; then it closed. What had happened Why on this night had Rachel noticed my arrival At supper I broke our unspoken compact and addressed her. Rachel, what made you look in just now Has anything happened The woman made no reply, yet there...
